Art Unit: 1795

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Klitsner et al. (US 2002/0122972), cited by applicants.

Klitsner et al. disclose a fuel cell (160) in which the electrodes include current collectors (174) that are in contact with the proton exchange material (172), and which include pores (170), that would form transverse passages (paragraph 0052). Thus, the current collector is between the electrolytic membrane and the rest of the electrode. The current collector includes metallic deposits, preferably of the noble metal gold (paragraph 0081), which would form non-porous zones, alternating with the remaining porous zones (paragraph 0043). The current collectors may have a comb structure (figures 6a-6c) or a honeycomb structure (figures 12b and 13), the latter being a type of grid. The electrodes, and thus their respective current collectors, may be placed on opposite sides of the electrolytic membrane (paragraph 0045).

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: Numeral 8 in figure 2 is identified as a “current collector”, on page 5 of the specification, but also as a “substrate” in figures 3 through 10, and on page 6. The same numeral thus appears to be used to designate two different items. Appropriate correction is required.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Marsacq et al. (US 2003/0021890) is the US equivalent to EP 1,282,185, cited in the International Search Report. While this European document and the article by Stanley et al. are cited with an "X" on the Report, they do not disclose solid electrolyte fuel cells in which the current collectors are in contact with the electrolyte membrane, and thus between the membrane and its respective electrode.
